Newspapers by Ancestry
https://www.newspapers.com/image/92943702

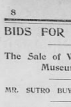
Downloaded on Dec 13, 2020

BIDS FOR CURIOS.

The Sale of Woodward's Museums.

MR. SUTRO BUYS HEAVILY.

Over $10,000 Realized—Scenes and Incidents—Sale of Wild Animals To-Day.



A motley crowd flow together at Woodward's Gardens yesterday to witness the sale of curios, relics, and miscellaneous collection at that famous resort. The curiosity hunter and the scientist, the seeker after the bizarre and the ignorance, the merchant and the hobbyist, the man with a hobby for collecting strange and rare specimens who seeks a business of trading in curios, the sharpers and the idlers—hence, the curious, the speculative, the theoretical, the curiosity seeker and the scientist—all rushed eagerly to the show window, and, strange to relate, about six hundred people actually bought curios. Including a score or more of lady congregated from the neighborhood.

The sale was attended with throbbing cities and adversive outbursts of wit and admiration. The throngers at first felt dubious and hesitated to bid, but the auctioneer by and the results proved and the attendance convinced the hope of some spirited contests, but scattered attraction prevented.

A Satyr, a Lively Bidder.

some of the bids: Four ostrich of eggs, $5; 27 specimens of mineral tooth, $7; 20 specimens of minerals, $10; shell of turtle, $5; 2 specimens of Indian relics, $10; 2 specimens of Indian relics, $10; collection of Indian relics, $10; collection of minerals, $10; shell of turtle, $5; collection of minerals, $10; collection of minerals, etc., $10; collect of pumice, $5.

The pieces in the museum were generally brought fair prices. Martin Kelly purchased a gigantic armadillo and a large bird cage.

The total amount realized out of yesterday's sales was about $10,000.

This morning the auction will be resumed.

THE AUCTION SALE AT WOODWARD'S GARDENS.

There was an assortment of curiosities that the curiosity seeker could not resist, and numerous instances were not lacking of the delight. For them the sale was the last word in curios, and they bought accordingly. Not less than a dozen were between sixty. The most gaudiness amongst us were wrapped up in the chase. The political "Hurr-rah-ah-!—Hurr-rah-ah-!—Hurr-rah-ah-!—