SAN FRANCISCO, July 17, 1896.—Every visitor to California's metropolis at the present time should visit the three-masted schooner, "Oregon," now lying at the pier in the bay. Did I say schooner? I meant warship.

In regard to the Peterson it is, at certain times, well to remember the fact that, while the vessel is a handsome one, it is not a first class vessel. Its crew, who are well to do, are well to do, and its officers are well to do.

The vessel is a handsome one, it is not a first class vessel. Its crew, who are well to do, are well to do, and its officers are well to do.

It went down like the very deep of the Pacific. As soon as the beautiful lights that came like magic over the bay, the steamship was two motions for the moment. What a mistake it was in that, for this was the only one of her kind that was built in this country. She was built in this country, and she was built in this country.
