OBSERVATIONS.

Mrs. Clara Foltz will reply to Judge Coffey's remarks on women, as presented by Annie Laurie in her article in Sunday's Examiner, on the evening of September 1st at the St. Nicholas Hotel, San Francisco. The parlors will be handsomely decorated and the affair will be one of social merit outside of the question discussed. Several hundreds of invitations have been issued.

The wind was cool and strong. The sun was warm and midday had seen the last vapory fog chased from mountain, vale and sea. The balcony of "Dolce far niente" hung in the shadow of its green drapery above the line where the land and waters meet, where the gnashing teeth of the waves fiercely gnaw the base of the rocks of Suto Heights. The roar of the sea lion, mingled with the deep, murmuring groans of the ocean, as billow after billow came surging in, seething, foaming, frothing, riding high in air, lashing one another, yeasting and rainbowing, then diamonding under the cavernous waves again, while the sun threw his yellow beam along the glassy edges as they twirled from view, to make room for their frisky, bright successors. The laughing ray that kissed the shadow from the crest, lighted all the depths. "In the name of all the gods at once" the rocky parapet above seemed to bow its head to honor the scene, and nod, as simultaneously from all the marble lips flowed: "Roll on, thou deep and dark blue ocean—roll."

White as the locks on the head that Philanthropy has given to the world, in a setting of flowers and foliage, stands the dwelling of the Geni of the Heights, with all its wealth of student literature and art, a modest, though fitting place for one whose rich imagination and great learning conceived and brought forth all that art can add to nature to secure to humanity a grand and gorgeous beauty which even lifts the soul from Nature to Nature's God. If the fostered idea be true that it is he who enjoys, not he who possesses, that is the real owner, how richly has Suto endowed his fellow beings! He has gathered in his millions of heavy dollars, drawn them into his gold and silver meshes, and spread them over the universe and is now entangling in them the pleasures of thousands. How the bright thoughts here engendered kiss the faintest fog of care away and gild the place with sunshine!

Walk or ride along the graveled ways and read in the rare verdure the perfumed words, "Welcome to Suto Heights," steal away from the noisy, thoughtless crowd, and resting in deeper shades where gods and goddesses reign, listen to the Sirens sing, hear the flutter of Mercury's wings, dwell in thought on the beauty of Venus, crave the wisdom of Minerva, linger amid the sports of Diana, turn where the warlike Mars gleams in white marble, kneel and hear the thunderbolt of Jupiter, and pile all Juno's wealth as high as heaven's self, and think, "Where is there another world that has developed so grand, so beautiful a reality?"

The student's dream, the learned man's conception, the Philanthropist's scheme has been followed by another effort, for public good and public pleasure that is just in the dawn of its great success. The immense and artistic bath buildings are arched above the ocean and resting, like the Colossus of Rhodes on an island of rock, and on the mainland. Long corridors and tiers of seats, with myriads of bathrooms, interspersed, with tropical gardens and gay pagodas are all beneath the glass roof. The great elevators are almost finished and thousands of people already promenade the grand hall and rest amid the tropical flowers. The white enamelled walls and tiled floors and great stairways are the wonder of all who have seen them. The great mirrors are being placed. It is perhaps the grandest public bath of ancient or modern times, the Diocesian not excepted. It was a herculean task, but it has been accomplished, and with the Heights will prove a far more lasting monument to the man, whose culture, education and wealth have given it, than any great monument reared by private greed.
