THANKSGIVING.

canvas pavilion, in the centre of which was a raised platform, upon which the exhibitions were given. The exercises began with an exhibition collar and elbow wrestling match, between Dick McGrath and Thomas Nolan, champion of the coast. They afforded considerable amusement and did some responsible wrestling, McGrath winning the first fall in 12½ minutes; Nolan winning the second and third falls in 18 and 6 minutes, respectively.

the second and third falls in 18 and 6 minutes, respectively.

Tom Cannon and Clarence Whistler gave a very pleasing display of their agility and strength in a bout at Graco-Roman wrestling—catch-as-catch-can. After some pretty work, which the addience seemed to enjoy as much as though they were witnessing a well-contested match, Whistler won the fall on a foul, Cannon having caught him below the wrist-tall on a foul, Cannon having caught him below the waist.

The German Turn-Verein, six in number, did good vaulting and tumbling on the parallel-bars, and were followed by two youngsters about 12 years of age, who were dubbed "Cannon" and "Whistler." They imitated their namesakes to the perfect satisfaction of the audience, "Whistler" winning the second and third falls.

The event of the evening was the exhibition of feats of strength by Duncan C. Ross, the champion of the world. Mr. Ross, when not in costume, does not appear to be a very extraordinary man; but when he appears in tights he is a marvel of muscle and strength. He toyed awhile with a 62-pound weight, handling it with ease with his little finger, and then with apparently as little effort as a commonly strong man would handle a twenty-pound dumb-bell, Mr. Ross took one that was two feet long and weighed 144 pounds, playing with it in various ways and satisfying the spectators that he was not overestimated as the most remarkable of all the athletes that have visited this city.

THE DAY IN OAKLAND.

Religious Services and Dinners to the Thanksgiving Day was celebrated in Oakland with a good deal of quiet festivity. People for the most part stayed at home or visited the union services at St. John's Episcopal Church and the First Congregational Church. At the former place of worship a fine musical service was given ander the direction of J. L. Le Noir, organist, by the quartet choir, consisting of Mrs. A. Fine, soprano; Mrs. Annie Mason, alto; John A. Britton, tenor, and W. D. Littleton, bass. At the First Congregational Church the large choir of the church, under the direction of John A. Benham, had charge of the musical part of the programme.

Miss Alice Dyer and A. J. Share were the soloists.

Rev. John Coyle of the First Methodist Church gave the sermon. At the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association and the Fruit and Flower Mission a Thanksgiving dinner was served by those societies and partaken of by a large num-ber who were unable to pay for the usual Thanks-

A large crowd was present at the cattle wharf on Long Bridge yesterday morning to witness the boat race between Leander Stevenson and Wilboat race between Leander Stevenson and William Growney for a stake of $25. The race was advertised for $200 a side, but when the principals came together prior to the time of starting they agreed to row for the forfeit money. James Aird acted as referee. Stevenson was the first to catch water on the word "go" being given, but scarcely had he taken a half dozen strokes when Growney took the lead and maintained the winning position throughout the race, the time being 16 minutes and 38 seconds. The race was the usual course of two miles. After this race came an amateur race. and 38 seconds. The race was the usual course of two miles. After this race came an amateur race, the entries being Paul Smith, William Blake and Oscar Branch. The start was an even one. Blake won, the time being 16 minutes and 8 sec-onds. When the victor arrived at the boat-house he was presented with a gold medal.

Young, Goal Cover; J. Smith, Backer; E. McSauren, Cover Point. E. B. Braden, Captain; W. Q. Jones, Busher; W. E. Stone, Backer; W. McDermot, Cover Point; F. A. Kinney, Goal Cover: S. Sazerlere, Goal Keeper. The score at the end of half an hour stood: Freeman's side, first, fourth and sixth games; Braden's side, second, third and fifth games, making a tie. The game is an Eastern one and has but lately been introduced upon this coast. It is becoming very popular, and when advertised draws large crowds to see the issue. Last evening it was conducted with much merriment and many falls, some of the skaters falling entirely over the rail. The andience was large and highly appreciative.

Thousands of visitors sought Golden Gate Park yesterday, rambling along the foot-paths and over the hills in the full enjoyment of pure air and charming surroundings. The cars leading to the charming surroundings. The cars leading to the grounds were well patronized until late in the day, some of them being so jammed with passengers that conductors found it extremely difficult to collect fares, and more than one being doubtful, when the day was over, whether he had gathered in all the nickels to which the company was entitled. The driving roads displayed an immense pleasure traffic in vehicles of all descriptions, the outlet to the ocean beach leading many to the attractions of the Cliff House and ocean beach,

MISSING CRICHTON.

His Mode of Life-Oysters, Champagne and Confectionery.

The presence of Secretary Crichton of the Odd Fellow's Bank, is still an unknown quantity, and the prospects of his capture or the discovery of the exact amount of his defalcation is still in the dim distance. Detectives Ben Bohen neglected his regular holiday turkey yesterday to work on the case, and made several discoveries that tend to show that Mr. Crichton was rather weak-minded than wicked. His salary was $130 per month, and of this amount $100 was invariably handed to his wife for household expenses on the first of every month. Inquiry at various haunts of the departed, revealed that his lunches alone cost more than the remaining $30. Instead of purchasing a drink and obtaining his noonday provender from the saloon table as most young men in his circumstances are in the habit of doing, Mr. Crichton regaled himself daily with oysters, washed down by a small bottle of wine, the total bill averaging $2 50. While he had a certain fondness for the society of rapid distance. Detectives Ben Bohen neglected his of wine, the total bill averaging $2 50. While he had a certain fondness for the society of rapid ladies, as stated in yesterday's Alta, he never allowed his passion to get away with his judgment, and his presents were mostly in the shape of boxes of candy and theatre tickets. One of the ex-society belles whom he was accused of squandering funds on has recently been sporting a $500 seal-skin coat, and she "asually mentioned the fact while in her cups that she had the Odd Fellows' Bank on her back, but inquiry proved that the garment was paid for by another admirer, whose money had the merit of belonging to the squanderer. Crichton did not know one card from another, it is currently reported, and never dealt in stocks. Beyond his confections and lunches, therefore, there is little extravagance attributed to him beyond buggy hire, and the bills for his drives to the Cliff rarely amounted to more than drives to the Cliff rarely amounted to more than $50 per month. At the rate he has lived for the past year, and his mild dissipation does not cover a longer period, he must have stolen about $2,000 to longer period, he must have stolen about $2,000 to make up the discrepancy between his receipts and expenditures. Mr. Bohen is of the opinion that the only stealing he could do was from depositors when their dividends were declared. Investors not in immediate need of their money seldom made prompt calls for these dividends, and by marking such derelicts as having been paid, Crichton was able to keep his books balanced. After tampering with the figures until further transformation was impossible, the secretary "lit out." Regrading his present whereabouts, the officer declined to say anything, and left the reporter to infer that he had a vague idea, but had not the location down sufficiently fine to put his hands on his man.

A. Northcut three weeks ago, while at San Rafael, hired a horse from Murray's livery stable and rode it to Petaluma. While at San Rafael he spent all of his money in riotous living, treat-ing and being treated at the different bars of that ing and being treated at the different bars of that town, until his money was exhausted. He then called upon C. Morse and introduced himself as a large cattle dealer, and that he was suddenly called to San Francisco. He succeeded in getting $20 from Morse and as security left his horse. The borrower disappeared, and Murray soon after appeared and claimed his horse, much to the surprise and disgust of Morse. Marshal Bloom was put on the trail, and yesterday succeeded in capturing Northcutt at Oakland, after trailing him through Sonoma and Napa counties. He was charged with grand larceny and embezzlement and lodged at the City Prison last night.

August Nordon, a waiter in the Southern Pacific restaurant in this city, was returning from Oakland on the El Capitan yesterday evening, and while seated on the railing, fell overboard. He was rescued by Italian fisherman, who happened to be near by, and was brought to the Receiving Hospital. Up to the time of going to press he was not in a condition to give any coherent account of himself. count of himself.

Pawning a Horse.

A. Nellacott was arrested in Oakland on Wednesday night, for pawning a horse in Petaluma to a liveryman named Morse, the horse baving been hired by him from another liveryman named Murray of San Rafael. The horse was a valuable animal and was pawned for $25. A charge of embezzlement was entered against Nellacott. The horse has been sent home to the owner.

A PEN-PORTRAIT OF CLEVELAND.

His Appearance, His Manner, His Conversation and His Business Ways.

(Edmund Hudsom in the Washington Capital.)

I stopped in Albany a few hours in order that I might pay my respects to the President-elect, and see for myself what manner of man this memorble campaign of 1884 has crowned with the greatest of earthly honors. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon I found the Governor sitting in the vast and splendid Executive chamber in the new Capitol building. How many Kings or Emperors ever received their subjects, I wonder, in such a noble apartment as this in which the chief ruler of the Empire State meets his fellow-citizens? The White House will seem to him very poor and cheap in comparison when he comes to occupy it. Perhaps the contrast will be great enough to make him an earnest advocate of a new Executive Mansion, or a rebuilt one at any rate. That would be something to be thankful for if it should happen. The Governor sits in a cane-seated swivel chair before one of a number of large red-topped desks, the others belonging to his Secretaries. Troops of visitors are constantly passing the chamber; and those who care to do so walk up to him and pay their respects. He asks no one to sit, but when there are ladies in the party he rises and shakes hands and exchanges a few pleasant words with them. The Governor's greeting is a pleasant one, but very simple, and with no excess of cordiality of voice or manner. His voice, one notices instantly, has none of the suave and fascinating quality of Mr. Blaine's. It is not a voice that has been used to magnetize or attract men and women. It is not the voice of a man who asks favors of others, nor is it the voice of an orator. But there is criticism and emphasis in it, and while not a soft voice, it is not hard nor rough.

The first impression one gets of Governor Cleveland is that he is a young man. There is a bald place one sees afterward that goes well down on the back of his head, but the face is the face of a man in the freshest health; a man full of life, who has never isleep.

In conversation the Governor speaks with a first and the strongest im-

AMERICAN STORIES.

An English Criticism Upon James and Howells.

IContemporary Review.]

The best American stories of the last few years are bright, sharp cut, clever, eminently readable and short (no small merit). They have all the virtues and faults of photographs, especially the minute and accurate details of a number of things noways interesting in themselves, and not assisting in the general picture, except as increasing its realism. One can not, however, but believe that the effect of the whole is injured by thus distributing the finish on all matters alike. The admirable word painting with which Mr. Howells sets Venice and Quebec before our eyes is quite out of proportion to his definition of character. As in a photograph, every stitch and plait of the gown, every leaf and each stone of the wall is given: but in these books, with few exceptions, not much of the being inside appears, only the superficial skin of life. This is hardly the way in which great pictures are composed, either in colors or words; external detail should only be insisted on in points serving to bring out and enforce the main object. Probably Mr. James and Mr. or words; external detail should only be insisted on in points serving to bring out and enforce the main object. Probably Mr. James and Mr. Howells would declare that they do not strive after high art, and that truthful representation, even of such supremely uninteresting human beings as American young ladies, if carried out conscientiously, is as much art as that of the drinking boors of Teniers or the Dutch vrows of Mieris. Whether the very artificial modern product of such "genteel" young ladyism can be rendered as interesting as the animalism of rough Dutch life may be doubted. The French cook gives a recipe for the exquisite dressing of a cucumber with elaborate care, but ends, "after all, the best thing you can do with the thing is to throw it out of the window." It seems a strange misuse of such talent as the American novelists possess to devote their time to depicting models so shallow; Some after the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and plant of the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and the steamer Cokland left the San Francisco and Stammering, as many sufferers have found, may sometimes be got rid of in a simple way. A correspondent writes to the Boston Transcript: "I cured myself of an annoying habit of stammering by inhaling a deep breath between every few words, and by never allowing myself to speak unless the lungs were fully inflated. A little careful attention soon made the practice a habit, and now I never stammer unless much excited."

Ready-made Houses.

Ready-made houses, imported from America, are selling as a novelty at Buenos Ayres. The demand for habitations at that place has been so great that the Provincial Government could not wait for the slow process of brick and mortar, hence ready-made houses had to be imported. The price charged for them is said to be so reasonable that should they meet the expectations of the Argentine people it is anticipated that a large trade in them will be done. The only fear seem to be that, owing to the heavy southwest winds which attack "La Plata," the ready-made houses may be blown away.

good deal of animation and the strongest impression one gets from him is of great firmness and force in adhering to a course once it is adopted. One would say, "Here is a man, surely, who cannot be driven, but who will do the driving himself whenever it be necessary," One might ask a good deal of such a man, but to demand, I should think, would be a losing business.

The New York Medical Times calls attention to the fact that since the production of cider in New England had almost ceased, there had been a marked increase in rheumatism and stone. European observers have called attention to similar facts abroad. Dr. Dumont, while examining the statistics of a hospital in Normandy, found that in fifty-nine years only four cases of stone had been admitted. The ordinary beverage in Normandy is cider. lumber, to Master (en route for Valparaiso; put in leaking).
