Champion Hits the Road.

Owing to a leak in the roof of his new undball alley Jeffries took to the road sterday. Muffred up in heavy sweaters and with his feet clad in strong shoes, the resterday. Muffied up in heavy sweaters and with his feet clad in strong shoes, the champion went on a ten-mile spin to test his breathing apparatus. "Kid" Eagan paced him in a cart and during the journey pointed out deep puddles for Jeffries to avoid. So intent was Eagan on preventing his friend dampening his feet that once he pulled up his horse in such a hurry that Jeffries, who was right behind the cart, in trying to sidestep a colision, tripped over the wheel and received a ducking. Eagan was profuse in his Jpologies. Jeffries laughed at his mishap, snook off the water and mud and they continued the journey.

Although perspiring freely and evidently tired from his long run uphill, Jeffries after a few minutes' rest doffed his coat and tried his hand at the rowing machine. He worked the oars vigorously for ten minutes and during this violent exercise kept up a running conversation. He laughingly told of his fall and ridiculed Eagan's driving. He seemed to take delight in rowing and said that he had found this form of exercise highly beneficial. It not only strengthened his arms but took out all the kinks that might be in them. He advised boxers to use this machine.

The St. Elmo Hospital, at Eighteenth and Douglass streets, nestling under th shadow of Twin Peaks, has added an-Clarke. Then it was turned into a sanied by order of the Board of Health. The institution was subsequently changed into a private asylum for the insane.

Dr. J. P. Frizell was installed as resident physician, and with his wife took uphis abode at the hospital. All went along nicely until, it is alleged, Dr. Frizell's wife began to usurp the attendance of the nurses to the detriment of the patients. Superintendent A. Murdock objected to this procedure and an open rupture was the result. Dr. Frizell and wife and three nurses left on Monday night, and a new resident physician was promptly installed. According to Murdock the St. Elmo Hospital holds a commission from the State Lunacy Commission which holds the superintendent alone responsible for the

"If I don't know how to box now," said Ruhlin, "I never will learn. Surely I couldn't learn anything during the two weeks that will elapse before the fight. Then again, I don't want to take any more chances of injuring my hands, for I certainly would not enter the ring with my hands in a bunged-up condition. My work from now on will consist of a run down to the Sierra Point house every morning. I will start out at 9 o'clock, and, as it is four miles down there, I will not get back to training quarters until about 10:45 o'clock. I have been over this run many times since I have been in training and must say I like it. At 3 in the afternoon I tackle the gymnasium work, punch the bag, do dumbbell exercise and skip the rope. This takes an hour of my time.

"I am in fine fettle at the present time and will do only enough work to keep me in good condition. I don't want to take off a lot of weight. As a matter of fact I want to fight Jeffries at the heaviest weight that it is possible for me to scale and still be in prime condition. I weigh 200 pounds now and will go into the ring only a few pounds lighter. You know Jeff can't fight under 220, and I would like to be as close to that weight as possible. I will go into the ring in proper shape. All puglists say they will win their fights, and I suppose I am like all the rest when I say that the public will see a big ring around my name after the battle."

in His Dugout in the Hills.

Special Dispatch to The Call.

CORONA, Oct. 29.-Juana Campeo was abducted by a Mexican named Rafael Cabriz last Thursday evening and was held a prisoner by him until Friday evening, when she was released and allowed to return home. When she arrived at her father's home she was in a serious condition mentally and physically.

The girl is 12 years of age and quite pretty. Her father has charged her abductor with a serious crime, and the warrant is now in the hands of the Sheriff. Up to the present time Cabriz has eluded capture, but every effort will be made to take him.

The scene of the abduction was a short distance from the vineyard of John Strong, which is about two miles north of Rincon, on the Pomona road. Juana had been picking grapes in the vineyard all day, and as evening approached left for her home, which was only three-quarters of a mile distant. She had gone but a short distance when a Mexican sprang out from the roadside and, under penalty of death forced her to accompany him. As the man was on foot, the girl could have been easily rescued hai any one witnessed the kidnaping. The man took the girl up into the hilis to a dugout and detained her there until Friday evening.

Aurain Campeo, the father of the girl, was cutting wood in the mountains a long way from the scene of the abduction, and the first news of the affair was brought to him by his son. Campeo let immediately, and with the help of friends endeavored to find and rescue his daughter and capture her abductor. He was not successful, and he then notified his employer here in Corona, W. B. Robards, who informed the Sheriff. Through the father's neglect in not reporting the case sooner the criminal may escape.

NINE BURGLARS ROYAL WELCOME GIRL PRISONER CAUGHT IN TRAP AWAITING HIM

> Holds Six at Bay in Corral.

Crooks Are Captured by Three Brave Men.

Oakland Office San Francisco Call, 1118 Broadway, Oct. 29. The most daring, spectacular and brave capture that has ever been made in Oak-Detective George Kyte and his own brother, Willard hodgkins, who is not a member of the Police Department, captured an entire gang of nine men who have been burglarizing the homes of Oakland for the last few nights. For twenty minutes Chief of Police Hodgkins alone heid at bay six of the men, while Detec-tive Kyte chased and captured two, who made a break to escape, and Willard Hodgkins captured another who had got away at the moment of the first attack. Kyte got his two men, young Hodgkins got his man and these three were herded into the corral where the Chief, revolver in hand, was keeping the other six cowed. The nine were then loaded into the patrol wagon and taken to the city Prison, where they are now on the small book.

For the last few nights small burglaries have been reported at police headquar-have been reported at police headquarters. These always occurred at night, and generally in houses where the people were away. Goods and money were taken, and it seemed as if the thieves were willing to take almost anything that came under their sight.

Many Burglaries Committed. Many Burglaries Committed.

The boldest burglaries were committed last night, when several places were entered and a large quantity of goods taken. The most important of these cases was the robbery of the residence of Hermann Bendel, one of the members of the firm of Tillmann & Bendel, who lives on the corner of Fourth and Alice streets. The family was away and the house was broken into and several hundred dollars worth of jewelry and valuable dress goods taken. Trunks were broken open and everything of value taken, while the rest of the contents was scattered about the room.

Dickenson's saloon, in West Oakland, was broken into and two revolvers and $8 in coin taken.

The house of Emery C. Thurber, at 375 Sixth street, was entered while the family was away for the evening, and a large quantity of goods was taken out and piled upon the sidewalk. The thieves were in the act of removing their plunder when T. J. Desmond came along and the men ran. Desmond pursued them, but they escaped in the lumber piles of the water front.

All told, there have been eight burglaries in three days, and the Police Department began to feel worried.

Detective Kyte was put to work upon the case to-day, and a little later Chief of Police Hodgkins, whose detective work has been most effective and attracted attention to the Oakland department, took his brother Willard and began to do a little work himself. These three men met in the lower part of the city where the gang seemed to have their headquarters, and after some hard work they discovered traces of the gang.

was found that some men, strangers It was found that some men, strangers to Oakland and not very savory of appearance, had rented a couple of rooms in a building in the very center of the block bounded by Second, Third, Jackson and Madison streets. The rooms were in a building in the rear of some old barns and small cottages, and were so hidden as to be invisible from any street, and extremely difficult to find.

Chief Hodgkins made his way over fences and through lots until he reached a small court or yard behind the building that had been rented by the gang. In this court were nine men, who were that had been rented by the gang. In this court were nine men, who were wholly unsuspicious that the police were around. Three of the men were preparing to leave, by different routes. There was no time to call for reinforcements, for by the time the alarm could be sounded some if not all of the men would be able to get away. There was only one thing to do and that was to move in thing to do and that was to move instantly and take the chances of three men with nerve capturing nine men, alle of whom were desperate and armed. Without a moment's hesitation Chief Hodgkins motioned to his brother, who formed a step with his hands and with the old athletic trick tossed him upon the roof of a low one-story building that overhung the court where the men were standing. It was the work of an instant for the Chief to get upon the roof and of another instant for the Chief to jump into the midst of the gang, revolver in hand.

Chief Hodgkins' Brave Act. It seemed as if he had dropped from the sky, and most of the men were too astonished to resist or run.

astonished to resist or run.

"I'll kill the first man that moves," sald the Chief.
But despite this threat the three men who had already prepared to leave continued their act, but with a great deal more activity. Two got through a broken fence and one went through a small alleyway in another direction.

Chief Hodgkins with his revolver covered the other six and announced his determination of killing the first man who stirred. He had them so completely covered that no one dared to take the chances.

termination or killing the first man who stirred. He had them so completely covered that no one dared to take the chances.

Meanwhile the man who had escaped alone tried to run, but was pursued by Williard Hodgkins. The young man was fleet of foot and had plenty of courage and finally overhauled his man. The fellow started to draw a revolver, but young Hodgkins made a jump and before the man knew what had happened he had him disarmed and handcuffed and was taking him back to the corral where the other six were held by the Chief.

The two men made their escape toward the railroad trestle which crosses the arm of the estuary near the scene of the arrest. By the time that Kyte reached the trestle the men were well out upon it and headed toward East Oakland. Kyte took possession of the buggy of the Chief of Police, which was near there, and drove up to the Eighth-street bridge and over to East Oakland. There he appeared at the end of the trestle toward which the men were heading. As soon as the men saw him they turned back toward where they started, hoping to get back before Kyte could again go the long distance around by the Eighth-street bridge. Kyte was equal to the emergency, and, picking up a citizen whom curiosity had brought to the scene, he stationed him at the East Oakland end of the trestle with a revolver and instructions to shoot the men if they attempted to return. The men could not see whether the guard at the end was the detective or not, and as none of the policemen were in uniform the citizen did very well.

Kyte jumped into the bugsy again and drove at the top of the speed of the department horse back to where he started. He got there before the men and remained in concealment until they were near enough to look into the muzzle of his revolver. "All the correspondents noted the extraordinary difference in the aspect and manners of the people here and across the border. We appeared to have suddenly got out of a region of wholesome, fresh complexioned people into a land of a meager, pallid race like one sees in some of our manufacturing cities, an active, brisk people, lacking the courteous manners of Canadians. To some of the young French Canadians of our party this was their first experience in the United States, and they recrossed the frontier more downright in their expressions of loyalty to Great Britain than they had ever been before."

the Duke and Duchess has been a success, as, on the whole, comparatively little interest has been taken in it, the war and other events having completely overshadowed the royal journey. The officials, however, are determined that it shall end in a blaze of glory.

At Portsmouth an effective naval display has been arranged. Fifteen battleships and cruisers will sail to-morrow to meet the royal yacht Ophir and escorther to Portsmouth. Other ships will join in the reception, and Friday evening the whole fleet in the harbor will be illuminated. King Edward and Queen Alexandra, with the children of the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, and other members of the royal family, on board the Albert and Victoria, accompanied by a flotilla of smaller royal yachts, will meet the Ophir in the channel Friday and escort her into the harbor.

The royal party will take train Saturday and reach London at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Here 1000 troops will keep the streets clear for the procession from Victoria station, by way of Constitution, Piccadilly and St. James streets, to Mariborough House. All traffic on the London and Brightton road will be suspended between the time of the departure and arrival of the royal train.

Newspaper correspondents who were with the Duke and Duchess' party contribute some remarkable letters to their papers here, highly appreciative of Canada, but they do not like the glimpse they got of the United States. Thus the Morning Post correspondent writes:
