FAIR AND IMPARTIAL PRIMARIES

Our evening contemporary is very solicitous about the welfare of the republican party of Bernalillo county and in its solicitation says:

"So this question presents itself: If the Journal means what it says, let it insist on the primary election of the delegates to the county convention. Now, we will see how influential the Journal is, and for how much it counts."

Our contemporary will please hear in mind that one of the marked differences between the republican party and the democratic party as organizations is that the affairs of the republican party are directed and managed by the individual members, and that the affairs of the democratic party are directed and managed by a few bosses. There isn't a republican in Bernalillo county who does not display a great deal of happiness over the harmonious feeling that exists among all republicans. Such differences as the party may have had are in the past and are forgotten, and today it presents a solid and united front to the enemy. And, likewise, there is not a republican in Bernalillo county who has the least fear that the affairs of the party, from the precinct meetings up, will be conducted in any other than the fairest and most open manner, and that the result all the way through will be a true reflection of the desires of the majority of the party. This is a pleasing state among republicans and is, indeed, good cause for the happy feeling that pervades them.

Our contemporary assumes to challenge us to advocate a voting primary for the selection of precinct delegates to the county convention. The writer of the editorial is probably unfamiliar with republicanism, and is certainly unfamiliar with the republicans of Bernalillo county. We do not suppose that it has occurred to any republican in the county that the precinct primaries would be conducted in any other way. We want to say now to all whom it may concern, that the precinct primaries for the selection of delegates to the county convention will be voting primaries, conducted in an absolutely fair and impartial manner, so as to give every republican a full and unhampered opportunity to express his preference in the most deliberate manner. The primaries in precincts 12 and 25 will be conducted by their respective precinct committees, of which D. M. Ferguson is chairman of precinct 12 and D. H. Boatright is chairman of precinct 25, and this will be the case in all other precincts. There will not be a list of names made up and printed in the form of a ticket for the republicans to vote, as would be the case with the democrats, even should they have a voting primary; but it will be so arranged that any one desiring to be a candidate for the county convention may have his name placed on the ticket. The names of all candidates will be on the ticket in alphabetical order and each republican voter will vote for the candidates that he may favor by putting a cross opposite their names. The tickets will be in the hands of the precinct chairmen and will be handed to the voter as he comes up and the voter will make the crosses opposite the names of those for whom he desires to vote and the ticket will be deposited in the ballot box.

This is distinctly a republican plan. The democratic bosses and dictators will be unable to comprehend it. Yet this is exactly what republicans expect, and the indication that they would not get it, they regard as equal to an insult. And republicans will attend these primaries in great numbers and will enter into a friendly contest for election of delegates to the county convention, which is well, and is as it should be.

It is this custom among republicans that holds the party so close in the confidence of the great mass of the people and makes it invincible in a political contest.

The republicans of Bernalillo county adhere to the principle announced by Theodore Roosevelt, and which we have before quoted as follows: "The right of popular self-government involves the right of voters not merely to choose between candidates before them, but also the right to determine who those candidates shall be."

Likewise, it is the uniform feeling among all republicans, without any exception, that republicans must and will nominate as their candidates for delegates to the constitutional convention good and true men only—the very best of men. The republicans of Bernalillo county are equal to the occasion that now presents itself and will depart themselves in a manner that will be most creditable.

FOLLOW HIM UP.

The Morning Journal publishes today a little story on the result of the great advertising campaign of the New Mexico Publicity association to date. It is rather interesting, chiefly because of the fact that the latest issue of the association bulletin, published by the bureau of immigration, has queries as to New Mexico resources and opportunities from every corner of the United States from New England to the Pacific. In the current bulletin, the immigration bureau urges especially the importance of "follow up" advertising. The point is well taken. It is easy to enlist the curiosity of the outsider as to New Mexico and to bring his first inquiry. With his interest awakened and his address available, the particular man or company which has what he wants should keep hammering persistently at that man until he decides to come to New Mexico. Persistence is what will win and that alone. Postage does not cost much and every new citizen brought in to make his home in New Mexico and assist in the development of the empire is a big asset. So, members of the association—and its membership is rapidly taking in every business man in New Mexico—should bear in mind the effectiveness of the "follow up" letter. Frank, concise personal letters which tell the truth will go much farther than extravagant claims, and prove much more convincing.

Another suggestion of the publicity association is to put a catchy advertisement of the new state on your envelope. Printing is inexpensive and a legend about the "Land of Opportunity" or the "New State" prominently displayed with your business heading on envelope and stationery will have far reaching results. It will speak to every visitor in every eastern home or office as it lies on the desk or table of every business man or home seeker and the total "pulling power" is incalculable.

The business man is urged to look after these little details of his part in the countrywide advertising campaign.

"Team work" will win in this big enterprise which has already so effectively proven its value.

Regarding envelope advertising, the recent bulletin says:

"Your attention is called to the printed matter on the envelope enclosing this bulletin. We have put it there, believing that it would attract a certain amount of attention to New Mexico, and several business houses who have large correspondence outside of New Mexico, have followed suit. We have ventured to urge every business house and individual having extended correspondence going outside of the new state to place either this or some other copy on their envelopes with foreign printed matter, care to deface the face of their envelopes with foreign printed matter. The back of the envelope is almost as good."

"Why not try having this or some other brief line of copy placed on your next order of envelopes? It will cost you only a trifle more and every little bit helps. If you do not care to make it general, as is the case with our envelopes, make it for your district, or your town. Every envelope that goes out with a word of information, or a suggestion of opportunity in New Mexico, does its share to encourage interest abroad. If nothing more, it proves we are alive; and that is worth while."

"It has been suggested that we prepare a printed, circular gummed sticker for use on the flap of the envelope and furnish these to members of the association. The office would be glad to have suggestions as to this and to know how many members would care to use these stickers if furnished free."

Socorro boosters always were generous. They have rallied enthusiastically to the support of the coming fair dog show, according to the following from the Socorro "Chieftain": "If the New Mexico fair and resources exposition really wants an exhibit of dogs from Socorro county, we can easily furnish ten thousand of the brutes and the officials up at Albuquerque need not concern themselves about sending them back."

W. J. Bryan has agreed to enter the territory and make one or more speeches in this territory during the campaign for constitutional delegates. He will, of course, use his matchless oratory to secure for us a progressive constitution. He will speak at Tucuman and perhaps other places.—Farmington Times Herald.

Pardon us, but will the gentleman speak on county options?

The Silver City "Enterprise" expresses the difference well in the following: "The republican party is the party of progress. Under its policies during the last fifty years the United States has witnessed the most wonderful and remarkable period of development and prosperity ever known in the world's history. Its policies are constructive, not destructive, progressive, not radical, safe and sane, but not narrow-parchy or insane. A constitution drafted by the republican party of New Mexico will be right in line with those policies and will safeguard the rights of the people of all classes to the fullest extent."

The Roswell Record says: "All the democrats of New Mexico ask is that the constitution be framed for and by the people. All the republicans want is a constitution for and by the special interests. And that's all there is to the present fight for the control of the constitutional convention. On one side stand the people, allied under the democratic banner."

Said banner, as admitted by the Record, being borne proudly aloft by that champion of the people, W. D. Walton, attorney for the Santa Fe railway.

BRICKBATS AND BOUQUETS

Well Taken.
The Journal's objection to the proposed idea of trading between the party bosses is well taken and we believe that such an attempt by the county going to put some two-by-four gangsters in the convention will be met by the voters in a manner that will compel these self-appointed rulers to dig up two or three more "streets" in order to keep the "willing tool" busy.—Tulsa Tribune.

The Judge Will Go Well Labeled.
The Albuquerque Journal is so busy criticizing other counties for supporting certain candidates to the constitutional convention that it is in grave danger of forgetting its own business which should be to keep one W. H. Andrews, out of this convention. If the Journal will see to it that Bernalillo county sends eight clean men to the convention we believe the Otero county newspapers will well and ably take care of Otero county's three representatives, one of which, in spite of the Journal's attacks, will be Hon. A. B. Fall, of Three Rivers.—Tulsa Tribune.

Editorial Views On Politics

Can't Serve Two Masters.

There is a growing sentiment in Grant county among the members of both parties that the corporate interests are going to dominate the constitutional convention and in evidence of this the adherents to this belief point to the number of railway attorneys who are candidates for the convention. They agree that a railway attorney cannot be consistent in championing the cause of the people on the one hand and that of the railway, in whose employ they are, on the other. In other words they cannot serve two masters.—Silver City Enterprise.

One for the Almanac.

The New Mexican need not concern itself as to what kind of men the democrats of Chaves county will send to the constitutional convention. That is a matter for the democrats of this county to decide, and they will do so without any butting in by the territorial gang organ of the Plunderbund.—Roswell Record.

Respectfully Referred to Martinez and Fall.

Yes, indeed, most emphatically are we opposed to a few residents of El Paso, Texas, dictating our course in the coming statehood campaign. We have plenty of able men within our own borders without going to Texas.—Springer Stockman.

That's Easy.

The Silver City Independent wants to know what is meant by a "safe and sane" constitution. That's easy. Read the United States constitution. It is the finest example on record of what a safe and sane constitution should be.—Silver City Enterprise.

ANOTHER "OWED" TO FALL.

Say now, Judge Fall, have you the gall. To come before the folks at all? We haven't forgot. You by a lot.

And that you've been And tried to win. The darndest lay we ever saw. But, thank the Lord, We've passed the word, And congress, too, sat down on you.

And now, Judge Fall, This is not all; We do not need your help at all. We'll make a state.

As sure as fate, And free from graft, despite all craft. The widow, and the orphan, too, We'll take care that they get their due.

The railroad man, Who, by your plan, Would have been left, his house bereft. We'll let him know.

What row to hoe. These things we know, And you can go, For all we care, to Jericho! But never more to Santa Fe.

The toll's interest to betray. Once more I'll say, You've got the gall. I think, Judge Fall, That this is all.

HOLLER MERELY A DEVICE TO KEEP UP COURAGE

Democratic Howl Skillfully Analyzed By the Innocent Bystander; Some Constitutional Wisdom.

The Albuquerque Morning Journal, Albuquerque, N. M., in its issue of August 1st, published a "number of editorials in the Tribune-Citizen." They seem to think they have discovered a nigger in the supply of combustible material commonly used in the cook stove. They insist on the republican party "putting themselves on record by a constitutional declaration." We suggest they don't carry about the republican party. They will be there with the goods—all wool, and a card side—when the time comes for them to do business. The republican party of New Mexico will use the very best and most up-to-date machinery for a constitution that progressive people with brains can devise. If our democratic friends will have just a little patience with us they will know in good time all about just how it happened. It is absolutely necessary on the part of the democratic party to keep up a prolonged howl and make as much noise as possible, particularly for their own edification. They remind me of the story told of the darkey who, when passing through a densely wooded district, thought his only salvation was to "holier" loud and long to keep off the devil or some imaginary threatening evil. They seem to be imbued with the idea that the political woods are filled with all sorts of republican fiends, and if they can "holier" loud enough and long enough they will attract the attention of a Moses to lead them out of the wilderness. If the democratic party were as honest as they seem to think the republican party dishonest, they certainly would have the country by the tail and a down hill pull. Now my dear unconvinced democratic friend, you must remember that the republican party has a solemn duty to perform, not only to themselves of this day and generation, but have always taken a pride in leaving an inheritance of greatness for future generations. So rest assured that a constitution framed by the republican party to suit the most fanatical will be the result of their earnest and honest deliberations. In your numerous indictments against the republican party did it ever occur to you that the seven million and odd voters representing that party are, in an average way, as patriotic and as honest as the average democrat? The wind-sucking tactics resorted to by the democratic papers are no evidence of an honest intention, and mislead no one except those not in touch with the signs of the times. My advice is that you play the owl awhile; possibly something may come your way.

You seem to be under the impression that the democratic party have a corner on something you call the "initiative and referendum." I am pleased to call your attention to the fact that you are simply attempting to define a cardinal principle of the republican party. "In the United States the referendum is employed in one form or another in every state and municipality. Very early in our history it became an established principle of American law that all state constitutions and proposed amendments should depend for their validity upon the ratification of the electorate at the polls. The logical complement of the referendum is the initiative. As we now exercise the initiative the people elect representatives to formulate and pass their laws. The recent idea of the people by means of a petition presented to the legislature requesting that a certain measure be submitted to a popular vote. Personally I am not in sympathy with the initiative and referendum, and recall idea. I believe it would mean an endless chain of attempted law-making. If a majority of the people today signed a petition requesting a beneficial measure be submitted to the popular vote, there is hardly a legislative body in the country that wouldn't gladly honor the request. It might be different with a majority of the states south of Mason's and Dixon's line. Possibly Texas may take kindly to the impeachment form of legislation, as she is not particularly color-blind. Oklahoma, representing a heterogeneous mass of human beings in the cyclone belt may be swayed on the basis of a modern trick of advertising by guinea in the unsuspecting. However, she will gradually emerge from the "call of the wild" and take her place among the states of a hundred years' experience. By the way, I notice the Tribune-Citizen fails to include in its declarations of constitutional good things for the people, a provision with reference to "prohibition." We see where they are right from a political standpoint in not tackling so momentous a question, but it will all come out in the wash just the same. And the democrats will be called upon to show their colors. It is just like them to overlook the issues not suited to their taste (when it comes to personal comfort).

DRINK CHECKS RECALL INTERESTING BIT OF ANCIENT HISTORY

(Lordsburg Western Liberal.)
J. Donagan and G. B. Spaw were out in the mountains south of Pyramid, after wood last week, when they made a find of some stuff that had been left for many years. In a little cave they found what had, apparently once been a bundle of clothing, but it was so badly rotted that it was impossible to distinguish just what it had been. On poking it over a leather purse was found. It was about five inches long, and a couple of inches wide, and was closed at the top with a puckering string, something like the old pocket purses that the miners used to hold gold dust and small nuggets. It was so rotten that it could not be opened at the top, but pulled apart at the sides. There were several blackened coins in it, and Spaw thought he had found a treasure. On pulling them out they were found to be drink checks made by the Brunswick-Balke company, with their advertisement on one side, and that of the issuer on the other. One of the checks had been issued by Moss & Sheldon of Lordsburg, one by the Central hotel, John Dougher, proprietor, and several by B. & C. In all of the B. & C. checks the B. had been drilled out, and on only one of them was there enough left of the B to tell what the letter was. None of the oldest residents know who John Dougher, of the Central hotel, was, and it is probable that this came from some other camp. In 1832 and 1834 Moss & Sheldon had a wholesale and retail liquor store which was located at the corner where now is the Eagle drug store. One night in 1834 it caught fire. The town turned out, fought the fire and put it out. On one side of the house there was a pile to the ceiling a large number of barrels of whiskey. The fire fighters started to save this whiskey and found the barrels empty. After the fire was put out everybody went to bed, and before morning it had started again, and swept the town to the east as far as where Charlie Lee's store now stands. Moss & Sheldon carried a heavy insurance and the charge was freely made that they set fire to their own place to get the insurance, and threats of lynching were made. It was never known here whether they collected the insurance on their empty whiskey barrels. Moss afterward had a lease on the Cliff house at San Francisco and Sheldon went into the who's sale wine business at San Francisco. The old safe in front of the Eagle drug store is a relic of this fire. It is supposed the checks marked B. & C. were issued by Burt & Castle. At the time of the fire they had a saloon about where the Clifton saloon is now situated, and were burned out. Burt went to Dallas, Texas, after the fire, and Castle opened a saloon where the bank is now situated, which he afterward sold to Lud Durnil. There is no telling who the unfortunate individual was who got stuck with all those drink checks, and buried them in the mountains of Pyramid.

WATER POWER LOSING VALUE ACCORDING TO ENGINEERING PAPER

The Engineering News says: Our attention is being called daily to the great value of our undeveloped water power and to the importance of keeping it from falling into the hands of private speculators. It may seem rash for any one to assert that water power in general is losing its value as a prime mover, owing to improvements in other sources of power. It is pointed out that improvements in motors have greatly cheapened the production of power, especially by the turbine and the internal-combustion engine.

"The value of undeveloped water powers is today much less than it was fifteen or twenty years ago. The cause of this decrease in value of water power is the great reduction in the cost for which power can now be developed by other prime movers."

"While the electricians have been busy with long distance transmission, and the hydraulic engineers with water wheels, development has been going on in other prime movers. The steam turbine, and the internal combustion engine, are the two machines which have well nigh revolutionized the field of power development in the short score of years since long distance transmission brought water powers again into active development."

"The steam turbine is not new historically; it is one of the oldest forms of prime mover, but in its very recent development, it is demonstrating itself to be almost certainly the motor of the future. At first developed, the steam turbine was not highly economical as a heat engine. It had the great merit, however, of keeping up its economy over a large range of loads. This merit it has retained while its improvement and development have been going on, and this improvement has been so great that the steam turbine of 1910 stands in a very different position from the turbine of ten years or even five years ago. In Chicago last year, steam turbines of 5,000 kilowatts, installed only six years ago, were removed and replaced by turbines of 12,000 kilowatts. The full economy of the new turbines, compared with the old, was sufficient to pay good interest on the cost of making the change."

"A brief computation will show that such steam economy as this makes the cost of coal a comparatively small element in the yearly power bill."

A Satisfying Food

Appetite is nature's signal for fuel and repairs. Healthy appetite calls for the simple food elements that supply the natural requirements.

Healthy appetite is satisfied when the proper kind and amount of food is taken into the body at stated intervals. But the wiles of the modern chef and caterer have created in most of us a false and often unnatural appetite which leads into all the different degrees of indigestion, dyspepsia, etc.—food insanity.

Grape-Nuts

is a satisfying food—it is composed of the natural elements to satisfy the natural appetite and restore order in the digestive machinery which may have been thrown out of gear by improper, though often "fashionable" foods.

The crisp, firm, "nutty" granules of Grape-Nuts make honest mastication necessary. Its wholesome flavour makes it appetizing, and the albumens, carbohydrates and Potassium Phosphate from the whole wheat and barley, makes it a satisfying food—both to the sense of taste and to the body needs.

Ten days' trial will convince any one that
