THE CALL FIRST TO HERALD THE RETURN OF THE TROOPS

Glad News Flashed by Wireless Telegraphy from Behind an Ocean-Haze Curtain.

“SHERMAN in sight.” That was the message which came from the sea yesterday to representatives of The Call. It was the first of a series of messages which were flashed by wireless telegraph from behind an ocean-haze curtain. The messages were received at the Cliff House and were the first of a series of messages which were received at the Cliff House and were the first of a series of messages which were received at the Cliff House...

blacker and dropped down like a great curtain over the lightship. From the ocean beach the guardian ship was no longer visible, but the watchers at the Cliff House, alert, born of war and sharp of eye, sat at their instruments. Then, shortly after 5 o'clock, the instrument began to tick. Behind the haze curtain of the ocean the man on the lightship was sending the words, “Sherman in sight.”

The message came from out of the depths of the sea. For days the watchers of The Call had been waiting for it. Day and night men with keen eyes and ears stood by the telegraph instrument in the basement of the Cliff House. Now and again words were sent, as far as human means could tell, by message power would be heard.

Day after day messages were sent and received. The wireless line was working perfectly. At noon yesterday there was no longer doubt of success. During the afternoon a heavy haze settled down over the ocean. Gradually it grew darker and darker.
